WA Talking Type Meeting

Thursday 18 February, 6.30 – 8.00pm

Book Discussion by Author, Jon Doust
“Boy on a Wire”

Jon is joining the WA Talking Type group to discuss how type plays out in his book, “Boy on a Wire”.

'The novel is apparently autobiographical and is publicised as such but Doust has done with his material what so many autobiographical novelists fail to do: he has turned it into a shapely story, with no extraneous material or diversions and with an absolutely consistent and convincing narrative voice.' Sydney Morning Herald

Jon's Blog | About Me

The manager of this blog was born in the West Australian town of Bridgetown, a long long time ago. Jon has a BA in English (Curtin) and can read and write. His latest book "Boy on a Wire" is published by Fremantle Press. He lives in Albany, West Australia, talks for a living, writes because he has to, and works with Jungian psychological models and archetypes. Some folk think he's funny, but that's not the point.

Jon's Blog Entry, Monday 25 May 2009

"Boy on a Wire" is still being reviewed and consistently well...
Wish me luck.

Jon's Blog Entry, Sunday 4 October 2009

This week a printer will start the presses on a vibrant new edition of "Boy on a Wire". Lovely...A re-print was all the reassurance I needed. It was never going to be good enough to knock out a book and have it sit in a warehouse for the next ten years. But the pace of the early sales did stun me, knocked me about a bit, then put a rocket under my confidence. This will be the first re-print.

My work has only just begun.
