Archetypes And The Beebe Model

A workshop presented by Andrew Gibson ISFP

We usually understand the functions in attitude (Se,Si,Ne,Ni,Te,Ti,Fe,Fi) in the context of dominant functions or in the form of an inferior, fourth function. Beebe offers us a model hypothesising that all eight functions in attitude co-exist in each individual's psyche. He also offers a means of perceiving the difference between a function as a dominant as against any other position in the psyche.

The Friday session uses video clips to illustrate the eight dominant functions in attitudes. The clips are taken from the following movies: Simon Birch, Now Voyager, Seinfeld and Prince of Tides. Video of Nelson Mandela, Bill Clinton, and John Howard are also included.

The Saturday sessions outline the archetypes, including Beebe's application of the archetypes to extend Grant's Myers-Briggs model and illustrate for the psyche of ISFP preferences. Other archetypes relevant to participants will be explored as time permits.

Preparation for participants: NOTE: articles will be sent on payment of Registration fee

- Review understanding of the functions in attitude;
- Consider each function within your own psyche and when presented by others; and
- Read the articles provided with Registration – Beebe, Clack, and, Ball et al.

Note: The Beebe model is but one of the many applications of archetype theory. The subject of archetypes is much more extensive than the one model presented in this workshop.

After spending 30 years in the banking industry Andrew studied psychotherapy and counselling at JNI and has a Masters in Analytical psychology from UWS. Andrew has been MBTI accredited for 12 years, has been an active AusAPT member for 10 years and is the AusAPT NSW/ACT immediate past President.
